"Educate, Educate"

New SLA chair wants to focus on robust outreach to members

By Cliston Brown    Editor-In Chief, SLA Connection

Nearly 40 years in Southern California haven’t entirely erased Robert Gilbert’s native speaking voice, and his focus on what he wants for the SLA in 2018 is just as sharp as his Brooklyn accent.

Gilbert, who works for Markel West Insurance Services, became the chair of the SLA Board of Directors after the 2018 Annual Meeting, and his mission is very simple: he wants the SLA to work hard to reach out to its members, build relationships, and help its 5,300 licensed brokers know what they need to know to successfully navigate the world of surplus lines in California.

“I want the SLA to have its members’ backs,” Gilbert said. “Educate and be informed. Our ability to supply industry information in a timely manner to our members is crucial, and it is the cornerstone of what our association is all about.”

Gilbert has made his goals and his hands-on leadership style clear, even as he was still preparing to take over the job from Tom Ciardello, the outgoing chair who made fiscal responsibility his hallmark during his year at the helm from February 2017 to February 2018.

“To be a leader, you’ve got to lead from the front. I’ll never forget that being told to me many years ago,” Gilbert said. “I’ve always had a lot of ideas but appreciate and respect the ideas of others. I’ve always wanted to incorporate all of that into a bigger role, and there’s nothing better than working with individuals who are clients but also competitors to get a broad view of our industry in California and the west. I’ve always wanted to be in a position where I could be that guy, to listen to their ideas and use them going forward.”

In addition to encouraging the SLA to increase its outreach to members, Gilbert is also keenly interested in the ongoing push to identify the next generation of surplus line professionals to which the SLA is committed.

Responding to its members’ indications that recruitment of young people is a priority to help perpetuate the industry, the SLA has created a Next Generation Committee, chaired by Pam Quilici, to help formulate outreach strategies, and also to identify and recruit promising younger professionals who might be a good fit within the industry.

“I’ve always encouraged young people to come into the industry,” Gilbert said. “I’ve always been a teacher, for lack of a better term, and with the Next Gen committee, I’ll be in a better position to know a lot of the up and coming people coming into our industry. I think the SLA gives me a better opportunity to meet more of those up-and-comers. Having hired a lot of young people who are now doing very, very well in our industry, I just think with all my experience, it’s prepared me to challenge and get to know various aspects of our industry.”

One of those young people who Gilbert helped mentor is now the new secretary/treasurer on the Board of Directors. Janet Beaver recalls benefiting from Gilbert’s genuine love of mentoring when she was first starting out in the industry in the 1990s.

“I met Bob 23 years ago while we were working for the same company at one of our offsite underwriting meetings and I said ‘I want to work for that guy’,” Beaver said. “He built a wonderful culture in our west coast office that I wanted to be a part of. Bob has longstanding, strong relationships, and what he taught me at a very young age is that relationships are crucial to our industry and should be nurtured.”

Gilbert is interested in the upcoming generation in part because he has not forgotten what it was like when he broke into the industry in the 1970s. He had not had an insurance career in mind after graduating from the University of Miami, but he basically found his way into the industry out of necessity.

“It was quite simple,” Gilbert recalled.

“I graduated college and wanted to be in advertising in New York City, and nobody was hiring, and my cousin’s brother-in-law was a headhunter and said, ‘Would you be interested in insurance?’ I said no. He said reinsurance. I said ‘What’s that?’ I went to an interview and ended up working for North Star Reinsurance, a subsidiary of General Reinsurance. I ended up in an incredible company, and North Star became General Star. I was transferred to LA in 1979, and except for one year in New York, I have been here ever since.”

In addition to establishing better bonds with its members and helping facilitate young people’s entry into the industry, Gilbert also wants to see the SLA continue its outreach to the movers and shakers in the corridors of power, building its government relations function to better position the industry with elected leaders, government staff and regulators.

And finally, at the end of his term next February, he wants to pass along what wisdom he can to the next chair.

“Being able to listen to the wisdom of former chairs from various companies has helped me a lot,” Gilbert said. “Incorporating all of that has gotten me to the point where I’m going to be spending a quality year getting the next person ready. Are you listening, Ms. Moran?”

Members Elect 2018 SLA Board of Directors

Moran, Beaver become vice chair, secretary/treasurer; four new members join the board

In addition to electing Robert Gilbert the new chair of the Board of Directors for 2018 in February, resident members of the Surplus Line Association of California (SLA) also elected the vice chair, secretary-treasurer and 10 more board members for the year.

Terri Moran, executive vice president of Cove Programs Insurance Services, is the board’s new vice chair, and Janet Beaver, vice president of excess casualty, Tokio Marine-HCC Casualty Group, is the new secretary-treasurer.

Moran served as secretary-treasurer in 2017, and Beaver served as a board member last year.

Elected to the board to fill four vacancies were Rich Gobier of Burns & Wilcox Brokerage, Cameron Kelly of Worldwide Facilities LLC, Kathy Schroeder of Sierra Specialty Insurance Services Inc., and John Washington of Arch Insurance Group.

Finally, voters confirmed Tom Ciardello of Worldwide Facilities LLC, the 2017 chairman, as a board member for 2018, and retained five other members from the 2017 board in their positions:

- Tim Chaix, R.E. Chaix & Associates
- Hank Haldeman, Worldwide Facilities, LLC
- Pam Quilici, Crouse & Associates Insurance Services of Northern California, Inc.
- Les Ross, Wholesale Trading Insurance Services, Inc.
- Jerry Sullivan, G.J. Sullivan Co., Reinsurance

All members of the board serve until the 2019 Annual Meeting, at which time a new election for the board and officers will take place.

Additionally, authorized voting representatives retained Harry Low as the SLA mediator for 2018.

The Annual Meeting scheduled for February 2019, in San Francisco and Los Angeles, will provide an opportunity for authorized voting representatives to vote on the new board and officers at that time. The SLA constitution requires one-third of all resident members who filed an SL-1 or SL-2 form in the preceding 12 months to vote in order to constitute a quorum.

If a quorum is not reached during the regular meeting, the SLA must solicit the necessary votes online or by telephone, a process which can take several weeks to conclude.

The SLA urges all authorized voting representatives of resident members filing business in 2018 to attend next year’s meeting, which is not only an opportunity to elect the new board but to network and interact with some of the leading surplus lines professionals in California.

Outreach is crucial in building and maintaining the relationships that are necessary to advance our goals and prevent unwanted legislation or regulation from impacting our industry.

That is why two of our SLA committees and members of the SLA senior staff have traveled to Sacramento three times in the first quarter of 2018, and why I joined the Wholesale and Specialty Insurance Association (WSIA) on a trip to Washington, D.C. in February.

In January, our Admitted Market Liaison Committee, along with SLA senior staffers Susan Bryant, Cliston Brown and I, went to Sacramento to meet with three key admitted market trade associations. In our conversations with the American Insurance Association (AIA), the Personal Insurance Federation of California (PIFC) and the Property Casualty Insurers Association of America (PCI), we learned what legislation was coming in California in 2018 and how our admitted market colleagues felt about it.

This annual outreach to the admitted market is not just part of our charge under our Plan of Operation with the California Department of Insurance (CDI), but it is also just good business practice. Having relationships with these organizations is crucial whenever we want to advance or slow down legislation affecting our members, because one of the first questions that legislators or regulators have about our own proposals is whether the admitted market supports or opposes them. We saw this last year when we were advocating for the enactment of AB 1641, the SLA-proposed legislation that gave the CDI greater flexibility to add items to the Export List. If at any point the admitted market had expressed opposition to our bill, that almost certainly would have been the end of it. But because of our strong relationships with the admitted market, we were able to work with our colleagues in that market so that the legislation did not run afoul of their interests.

In February, Cliston and I were back in Sacramento with our Legislative Committee, where we met with two state senators who are heavily involved in insurance issues, as well as staffers on the Assembly and Senate insurance committees, and the offices of several other state senators who represent our Legislative Committee members. One of our meetings there was with State Senator Ricardo Lara, a Los Angeles County Democrat who is running to be the next insurance commissioner.

Again, having these relationships is crucial, and they were certainly beneficial to us in 2017. Getting to know the Assembly Insurance Committee staff presented us the opportunity to have our language included in AB 1641, which was sponsored by the committee chair, Assembly Member Tom Daly of Anaheim. We also had previously met Chairman Daly, so he knew us and was willing to champion our legislation. With his leadership, AB 1641 sailed through the legislature without a single vote in opposition at any stage of the process.

Having a good relationship with the insurance commissioner and his office is also vital for us. Our strong working relationship with the outgoing commissioner, Dave Jones, kept us front of mind when regulators created regulations for legal recreational cannabis that would have excluded surplus line insurers from covering this product. Jones, who is term-limited and running for attorney general this year, immediately understood why this was a problem and put us in touch with his staffer who was working with the Bureau of Cannabis Control to help shape the regulations. Ultimately, the regulations enabled our industry to write this business.

And in March, our member Tim Burnett went to Sacramento to testify before a key committee on the wildfire issue that is sending higher than usual numbers of homeowners policies into our market.

We want you to know that the SLA is pushing hard on outreach every day to build the kinds of relationships that we need to ensure that you can do the business you are here to do. And we’ll keep it up.

This summer will see the end of an old tradition, at least in its current form. This year’s Western States Surplus Line Conference (WSSLC), hosted by the California SLA, will mark the end of this longstanding annual get-together of the various western surplus lines associations. Plans are in the works for the California Insurance Wholesalers Association (CIWA) to begin offering a similar event in the summer of 2019.

“While Western States has been a tremendous event for our industry for many years, it is also an extremely expensive and resource-consuming conference, and it was creating a real strain, especially for some of the smaller SLAs when their turn came to host it,” said SLA chief operating officer Joy Erven. “While all of the SLAs who have hosted the event have done a tremendous job, it is just a fact that many of them were spending time and money that were disproportionate to their available resources. So while we are sad that this is the last one, we are determined to make this final Western States the best one ever.”

To that end, the SLA has booked the Ritz-Carlton at beautiful Lake Tahoe from July 12-14.

This year’s WSSLC includes fascinating guest speakers, including author Peggy Grande, who wrote “The President Will See You Now” about her experience as executive assistant and official photographer to President Ronald Reagan after he left the White House in 1989. Her travels with the former president enabled her to get up close and personal with many notable world leaders, including former Soviet premier Mikhail Gorbachev, former British prime minister Margaret Thatcher, and Mother Teresa.

Also scheduled to speak at WSSLC is Steve Beuerlein, a former NFL and Notre Dame quarterback and CBS game analyst who has become a motivational speaker.

In addition to these great keynote speakers, attendees will also have many activities to choose from, including a golf tournament; a wine tasting and tour of historic Truckee; kayaking and paddleboarding on Lake Tahoe; and numerous opportunities to network with surplus line professionals from all over America. While this event is held by the western states surplus line associations, attendees do come from all parts of the country, and there is always a large contingent of California surplus lines professionals.

Please do not miss the opportunity to attend this final WSSLC this summer at Lake Tahoe. Register now at http://slacal.org/special-events/wsslc-2018 and make sure to join us for the last, and we hope best, Western States ever.
